Subject Overview:	This subject explores the transformative and far-reaching effects that war has had on state, society, and the individual throughout history. With an emphasis on warfare over the past 200 years, this subject will focus on how war has changed from a narrowly defined engagement between military forces, to one that has grown to encompass a 'total experience' involving the mobilization of virtually all segments of society both conceptually and in real terms. We will also trace the interconnectedness between the transformation of war and the development of new technology, changed concepts of morality, 'just war', and altered perceptions of the relationship between the state and the individual. This subject draws from and shows how war has not only influenced the history, politics, and diplomacy of nations, but literature, music, art, technological innovation, and expression of the individual.
Assessment:	A primary source document analysis of 2,000 words 40% (due mid-semester), a 2-hour final exam 50% (scheduled during exam period) and tutorial participation 10%.
