Subject Overview:	This subject focuses on social work practice in the mental health field with particular emphasis on mental health policy and practice. Topics covered include the nature of mental illness and how consumers, their relatives and friends experience it, and contemporary approaches to treatment and recovery. Also examined is the national and state policy context, how services are organised, the particular contribution of social work practitioners, including core knowledge and skills, and the different settings in which they practice. A particular focus will be Victoria's area-based mental health services, the local networks of inpatient and community-based services which replaced the large psychiatric institutions from 1994-2000. The elective draws on guest lecturers to provide a broad range of perspectives. Guest lecturers will include those presenting the views of consumers and of family carers, as well as psychiatrists, social workers and other mental health professionals talking about their practice. In addition to focusing on services for adults, mental health services for older people, and for children and youth will be explored. Issues relevant to Indigenous Australians and people from diverse cultural and linguistic backgrounds will also be considered.
