Subject Overview:	The implementation of the legal rules governing the conduct of military hostilities is literally a matter of life and death. The lecturers in this subject combine current international practice in the relevant law – deployment in contemporary military operations and participation in war crimes trials – with acknowledged research expertise. The subject briefly introduces the historical development of international humanitarian law and raises a series of questions around the effective implementation of the law. What is an armed conflict and how do we determine the legal character of a conflict?; how do combatants distinguish between civilians and enemy combatants and how can protection for civilians in armed conflict – particularly women and children – be improved?; who can lawfully be targeted and killed and who can be detained?; which weapons are prohibited and which are permitted? Principal topics will include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"># The historical development of international humanitarian law and its rationale in a broader context# The Geneva Conventions of 1949 and the Additional Protocols of 1977 and developments in customary international law# The unique role of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) in armed conflict

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The relationship of international humanitarian law to other related areas of international law, such as the use of force, arms control and disarmament, human rights and international criminal law # Implementation of the law, through case studies # Current issues for development of the law, such as cluster munitions, child soldiers, the protection of women in armed conflict and the law of occupation and terrorism.
Objectives:	A student who has successfully completed this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Be conversant with the international legal principles regulating the conduct of armed conflict # Understand the principal institutional structures for the implementation of international humanitarian law # Be aware of the influence of legal principles on military strategy and deployment # Understand the key issues for further development of the law and current initiatives for change # Appreciate the existence of critiques of the efficacy of the legal principles and be able to evaluate the relative strengths and weaknesses of the law.
