Subject Overview:	Contemporary cultural and political conflicts are increasingly articulated with the body, bodies, gender and sexuality at the heart of their concerns. This subject brings insights from contemporary theory and social research to our understanding of how and why this occurs. The subject begins by examining theories of the gendered body. It then moves to a consderation of the links between gender, sex, sexuality, cultural difference, class, popular culture and global politics. In 2013 the subject will have a particular focus on the crossing of borders - how do 'non-normative' bodies - queery, trans, disabled, immigrant, female and 'others' - challenge theories, politics and popular understandings around gender, identity and bodies. What are the connections between bodies, feeedom and inequality?
Learning Outcomes:	<ul> <li>Students who successfully complete this subject will develop:</li> <li># an understanding of a range of theories of the body and their application to meanings and practices related to gender, culture and sexuality;</li> <li># an understanding of key concepts in contemporary feminist thought;</li> <li># an awareness of the interrelationships between major social divisions including those of gender, race, ethnicity, disability, class and sexuality;</li> <li># an ability to locate these social divisions in specific cultural and historical contexts;</li> <li># an understanding of the theoretical frameworks linking bodies, selves, culture and politics.</li> </ul>
