Subject Overview:	While 'Construct Only' and 'Design and Construct' delivery methodologies remain the most common form of construction procurement, principals and contractors increasingly are delivering construction projects via innovative procurement methodologies. This subject – designed to complement the existing infrastructure delivery subjects already offered within our program – provides students with a detailed knowledge of tendering, specialised forms of construction procurement and other key contract forms currently in use in the Australian construction and infrastructure market. The subject also provides an overview of the key legal and commercial issues affecting these procurement methods and specialised construction contracts. The subject lecturer is Richard Wilkinson, a construction lawyer and alumnus of the Master of Construction Law. In addition to bringing to the classroom his own extensive experience in construction procurement law, Richard harnesses the specialist expertise of leading construction practitioners as guest lecturers. Principal topics will include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Expressions of interest and invitations to tender # Alliance contracting # Managing contractor agreements and construction management agreements

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Consultancy agreements # Engineer, procure and construct agreements # Interface agreements # Design and construct joint venture agreements and consortium agreements and facilities management and operation and maintenance agreements.
Learning Outcomes:	A student who has successfully completed this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Have a detailed understanding of the tendering phase of construction projects, the risks for principals and contractors and techniques to manage those risks. # Have a detailed understanding of specialised procurement methodologies in construction projects. # Have a detailed understanding of construction joint venture arrangements and consortium agreements. # Be able to provide meaningful advice about the various procurement options available to principals and contractors and be familiar with drafting techniques specific to these specialised procurement forms.
