Course Overview:	Government operates within a framework of law and practice, consistently with the rule of law. This framework includes constitutional law and administrative law but extends well beyond both to a host of particular legal regimes that apply to government actors.
	This is a dynamic branch of law, constantly changing in response to new pressures and government responses. It lends itself to comparison between countries, enabling students to understand different ways of tackling similar problems and to draw lessons from them. In an age of globalisation, it has a large and growing interface with international law, requiring a grasp of both areas.
	The specialisation in government law reflects the changing nature and complexity of the field. The subjects offer students expertise in matters that lie at the cutting-edge of government law in Australia and elsewhere.
Learning Outcomes:	Graduates of the Graduate Diploma in Government Law will:
	# Have advanced knowledge within a systematic and coherent body of knowledge relating to the field of government law, including the acquisition and application of knowledge and skills in relation to:
	# the legal and institutional framework for Australian government in theory and practice # an analysis and resolution of the complex problems of government law
	# a range of alternative approaches to government law in other countries and systems and the methodology of comparative public law
	# the context within which government law operates and the sensitivities peculiar to it
	# Have advanced cognitive, technical and communication skills that enable them to: # analyse critically, evaluate and convey information and # generate ideas and solutions to complex problems from both theoretical and practical perspectives in the field of government law # Apply knowledge and skills to demonstrate autonomy, well-developed judgement, adaptability and responsibility as a practitioner or learner in the field of government law.
Course Structure & Available Subjects:	Students must complete four subjects from the prescribed list.
