Subject Overview:	This subject explores the science of the factors that enable individuals to operate at the peak of their potential; including how to participate in more engaging activities, how to live healthier, be more resilient, have more satisfying relationships and lead more productive and fulfilling lives. The subject will explore teachable skills and pathways for cultivating wellbeing. Students will be exposed to a variety of disciplines including psychology, social science, education, philosophy, sports science, sociology, and organisational science. Students will learn about the historical and philosophical views of a life-well lived; the paradigm shift from problem-focused to strengths-based approaches; and the evolution of the view of the human, from passive stimulus-response beings to active, self-directed agents. Students will apply interventions that have been evaluated using the scientific method to increase their own wellbeing as well as the wellbeing of those around them.
Learning Outcomes:	Students will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># Gain an interdisciplinary view of wellbeing.</li> <li># Think of ways this knowledge can be used to educate communities and society.</li> <li># Distinguish between problem-focused versus strengths-based approaches in education.</li> <li># Create innovative exercises deigned to apply this knowledge through practice.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	There are two assessment tasks:1500-word analysis of the student's experience applying this knowledge to every day life, 35% Intensive availability, due within a week of end of teaching Semester 1 availability, due mid-semester 2500-word assignment on wellbeing theories and ways this knowledge can be used to educate communities and society, 65% Intensive availability, due three weeks after the end of teachingSemester 1 availability, due end of semester Attendance at all classes (tutorial/seminars/practical classes/lectures/labs/online classes) is obligatory. Failure to attend 80% of classes will normally result in failure in the subject.
