Subject Overview:	This is an intensive subject that will be taught in English. The subject will explore a number of universal concepts – the “other”, nationality, tolerance, humour and a material object of choice – in an international academic and cultural context. Through an exploration of these concepts in a comparative setting, the subject will be (a) introducing the students to an interdisciplinary approach to research, (b) assisting students to improve their academic and presentation skills, (c) creating opportunities for these new skills to be put into practice, and (d) helping students to operate in an international setting. Students will be challenged to use a variety of skills in order to communicate with each other and with the invited speakers, and will become aware of a range of theoretical approaches and academic traditions that are relevant to engaging with the universal concepts the subject is exploring. This seminar will be held in Oman, which will act as the host country to students from the three universities (Melbourne, Leiden and Sultan Qaboos). Fieldwork is an essential part of this subject and will be in Muscat and Nizwa in Oman. Teaching will be in Oman. However, students are expected to complete a set of readings before they travel to Oman.
Learning Outcomes:	On completion of the subject students will be able to: Demonstrate an awareness of how the key three concepts used in the subject function in at least three cultural traditions. Engage competently in discussion using a range of academic and communicative skills. Write in a sophisticated and critical manner and in an academic style that pertains both to general and specific questions.

Assessment:	A group project, 750 words, 30% (due during the course), fieldwork presentation, 1,000 words, 20% (due day 13 of the course), a 2,000 word paper 40% (due late February) and participation in debates and presentations, 10% (throughout the course).
