Subject Overview:	Small ensembles normally consist of two or more players performing works designed to be played unconduted. Students are encouraged to investigate repertoire which allows for a balance between old and new music and a spread of instruments/voices within ensembles which goes beyond the traditional notion of chamber music. It is expected that ensembles rehearse regularly outside the formal supervised times. In the case of composition students, this subject involves participation in directing/conducting a variety of ensembles. Various large ensembles are arranged yearly depending on the student cohort and specific departmental and cross-departmental instrumental and vocal make up.
Learning Outcomes:	Repertoire and Composition Upon completion of this subject students should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Blend cohesively within a group in all areas pertaining to ensemble performance i.e. intonation, balance with respect to harmonic and melodic priorities, timbre, rhythm and pulse;</li><li>• Work as a member of an ensemble i.e. understand and implement an appropriate attitude; reliability and commitment to rehearsals/tutorials and discourse amongst players;</li></ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Gain a more developed awareness of ensemble repertoire particularly in relation to each student's specific instrumental area.</li> </ul> Improvisation Upon completing this subject students should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Have developed listening and playing skills in the area of small and large ensemble performance;</li> <li>• Have the ability to play in an ensemble considering the aspects of style interpretation, arrangement, balance, interaction, dynamics, tempo, placement, rhythm and harmony.</li> </ul>
