Subject Overview:	This subject examines contemporary debates in political and social theory with a particular focus on developments within and challenges to liberal democracy. Initially the difficulties of liberalism will be analysed in the light of theories of postmodernism, new materialism, and communism. From this basis recent challenges to democratic renewal are discussed including those concerned with walled states, climate change, and civil society. Alternative theories of political renewal in complex, pluralistic societies will then be examined focusing in particular on the way that they understand violence, disagreement and incivility. The subject concludes by evaluating recent radical democratic theories which are concerned with establishing a new ethical framework through which we can rethink political disagreement.
Learning Outcomes:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># understand the major challenges to liberal democracy in contemporary political theory.</li> <li># be able to explain the implications for political theory of recent social and cultural phenomena such as postmodernism and globalization.</li> <li># grasp theories of democratic renewal such as those associated with new materialism and agonistic politics.</li> <li># understand the relationship between civility and incivility and their implications for understanding democracy.</li> <li># comprehend the growth of pluralistic interpretations of complex societies in relation to political conflict and disagreement.</li> <li># be able to explain the reasons behind the emergence of radical theories of democracy and their implications for political ethics.</li> </ul>
