Subject Overview:	This subject provides an advanced understanding of the contemporary global marketing environment. It traces the emergence of the new generation of global media platforms since the 1980s, including satellite and online, and examines the growing structural integration of advertising, marketing and public relations firms over this period. Through case studies of global marketing campaigns and global brands, it demonstrates the extent to which global marketers must continue to negotiate different cultural and regulatory settings, underlining the continuing importance of national and regional contexts in a global environment.
