Subject Overview:	This subject examines the history of film and media censorship, its relationship to morality and the public sphere. Students will gain a theoretical understanding of the key debates surrounding the controversial area of censorship. They will also study censorship in national contexts with emphasis on America, Australia and the Pacific. This subject will explore the changing moral standards that affect film and media censorship and why some historical periods are more repressive than others. It will also cover the importance of the public sphere in censorship debates and the way in which these debates have changed in relation to questions of pornography, new media and the Internet.
Assessment:	A case study and presentation of 1500 words 25% (commencing at the beginning of the semester and due at the end of the semester), and a 3500 word research essay 75% (due at the end of semester). Assessment submitted late without an approved formal extension will be penalised at 2% per day. Students who fail to submit up to 2-weeks after the final due date without a formal extension and/or special consideration will receive a fail grade for the piece of assessment.
