Subject Overview:	This subject will examine the range of human resource management systems that seek to measure employee work performance and the implications for the design and evaluation of reward systems. The focus is on the design and evaluation of performance and reward management systems for both managerial and non-managerial employees. We will examine the link between the design of effective systems and corporate strategy and utilise a range of human resource management outcomes to evaluate the impact of various performance and reward management systems for employees, unions, managers and organisations. This subject will examine these issues from both a practitioner and research perspective.
Assessment:	One 2-hour end-of-semester examination (50%), and assignment(s) not exceeding 3000 words (50%).
