| Subject Overview:                 | English and Literacy teaching are changing in response to new challenges, such as the expansion of ICTs and their role in learning; the proliferation of multimodal texts, and the development of the concept of multiliteracies; and the emphasis on social views of language and its role in constructing particular ways of seeing the world. This subject will examine the theoretical frameworks underpinning these changes, and recent advances in English/literacy curriculum and classroom practice in light of them. It will focus on research-led teaching which underpins curriculum initiatives such as VELS and the Early and Middle Years programs, focusing specifically on issues to do with: critical and creative engagement with texts; critical thinking and interpretation of texts; knowledge of language, its structures and its social functions; and ICTs and the forms of literate practices required for successful engagement with new technologies. |
| Assessment:                       | Assignment 1 (30 per cent): a written essay of 3,000 words, due mid-semester         Assignment 2 (60 per cent): a project of 5,000 words, due after end of semester         Small, weekly web-searches and between session tasks (10 per cent)  |
