Subject Overview:	This subject will introduce students to modern drama through a study of seminal dramatic texts representing the various dramatic and performance movements that emerged from around 1890 to the mid-twentieth century. These movements will include, among others, realism, expressionism, symbolism, absurdist theatre, kitchen-sink, modern tragedy and political theatre. The texts and the genres they represent will be analysed through lectures, seminars and workshops, and there will be a focus on the plays in performance.
Objectives:	Students who successfully complete this subject will understand the theories and practices of modern drama and theatre and its historical and cultural contexts; work effectively in a team to present the results of research through both rational argument and the presentation of performance material; develop appropriate research methodologies in the field of modern drama and theatre; critically analyse and evaluate arguments and theories regarding the practice and development of modern drama and theatre; identify and critically analyse the traces of modern drama in contemporary theatre practice.
Assessment:	Work to the equivalent of 4000 words: comprising an essay of 2000 words 50% (due after the end of semester), a creative play presentation equivalent to 1000 words 25% (due during semester) and a tutorial presentation equivalent to 1000 words 25% (due during the semester). A hurdle requirement of a minimum 80% attendance applies.
Prescribed Texts:	A subject reader will be available.
