Subject Overview:	This subject examines the media and everyday life in transnational Asian context. This year, the focus of the subject is on how Japanese popular culture has, via a variety of media, become part of everyday life in China, Hong Kong, Korea and Singapore. Along with a close examination of these pop cultural forms, the subject also provides general introduction to major themes in the study of popular culture and cultural studies. Current topics such as postwar cultural history; new media and technologies; consumption and lifestyle; tourism; and hegemony and resistance will be closely examined. No prior knowledge of Asia and any of its languages will be required.
Objectives:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # to introduce students of Asian Studies to the academic approaches taken when looking at popular culture; # to introduce students of cultural and media studies to one of the world's most vibrant cultural industries; # demonstrate a familiarity with concepts such as popular culture as both a product and a determinant of national and gender identity and the complex relationship between popular cultural phenomena and society in general; # be able to communicate knowledge intelligibly and economically through essay and examination writing, and tutorial discussion; # demonstrate a familiarity with the English language writings on these issues; # acquire an understanding of cultural context through developing a critical self awareness, being open to new ideas and possibilities and by constructing an argument; # acquire skills to critically think and analyse through required reading, essay writing and tutorial discussion, and by determining the strength of an argument.

Assessment:	Minimum attendance of 70% of tutorial sessions as a hurdle requirement; tutorial participation 10% (on going); one short essay 1,500 words (due mid-semester); and one final essay 2,500 words (due during the examination period).
Prescribed Texts:	Materials supplied by the Institute.
