Course Overview:	The Melbourne Law Masters offers an extensive range of subjects in international law. You can tailor your degree to suit your career goals and intellectual interests, focusing on issues including international humanitarian law, economics, finance and taxation, law and development or courts and dispute resolution. International legal practitioners, as well as those working in international agencies or non-governmental organisations, will greatly benefit from the specialised knowledge and expertise that this program provides. The program's diversity, with specific or general subjects available in both public and private international law, allows students to specialise in a key area or gain a broad-based degree in international law.
Objectives:	The Graduate Diploma in International Law focuses on: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The nature, major principles, processes and structures of the international legal system and the relationship between international and domestic law # Legal issues in contemporary public and international affairs and advanced legal analysis of the application of legal principles to such circumstances # The increasing significance of international law domestically, regionally and globally.
Subject Options:	Students must complete four subjects from the prescribed list. Principles of International Law is compulsory for most students and, if possible, should be completed before other subjects. Students who do not have a law degree from a common law system or any prior legal studies or experience are also expected to complete the two-day preliminary subject Australian Legal Process and Legal Institutions (http://www.masters.law.unimelb.edu.au/index.cfm?objectid=3A45C705-1422-207C-BA6886C167CEB45F&view=overview&sid=4170) .
