Subject Overview:	In order to be inhabited Australia had first to be named, mapped, imagined and thereby invented. From this process of invention, a new poetics emerges enmeshed in a complex raft of inter-subjective and intercultural dialogue and conflict. Drawing on key Australian literary texts we will explore how successive writers have engaged with the new - inter-racial, environmental, social and sexual dynamics of the emerging culture. Themes to explore include narratives of domicile and domicide, exile and incarceration, tropes of the unbound house, of a "scribbling" nature, a haunted earth, and of broken mirrors.
Objectives:	Students who successfully complete this subject will be familiar with key Australian literary texts and with central issues in current debates about Australian colonial anpost-colonial history; have been introduced to key concepts in contemporary literary and critical theory; have developed an increased awareness of argumentative and analytical practices which can be used to develop their own writing.
Assessment:	One class paper of 1000 words 25% (due during the semester) and one essay of 3000 words 75% (due at the end of the semester). Students are required to attend a minimum of 9 tutorials in order to qualify to have their written work assessed.
