Subject Overview:	An introduction to the study of social movements and the general issues raised by the problem of social change and political conflict. How and why do political changes occur? If social movements did not exist, would societies need to invent them? The subject examines the development and political arguments of the principal Australian social movements in the past 40 years and the reactions to them: the green movement; the Aboriginal movement; the women's movement; the homosexual liberation movements; the peace movement; multiculturalism and refugee action groups; the labour movement and the anti-corporate globalisation movement.
Objectives:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # understand the major theoretical approaches to the study of social movements; # express familiarity with the development and political arguments of the principal movements for change within Australian society and of the opposition to them; # think critically about the problem of social change in the study of political science.
Assessment:	An essay of 2000 words 50% (due mid-semester) and a 2 hour examination 50% (during the examination period).
