Course Overview:	Major shifts in laws governing the workplace and labour force in Australia mean there is a growing need for knowledge and analysis of employment and labour relations law. Melbourne Law School's graduate program in labour relations law is ideal for legal practitioners, the public sector, private management and personnel services, trade unions and employer groups. Subjects cover issues relating to minimum labour standards, enterprise bargaining, discrimination, and health and safety. In-depth analysis of recent developments in this complex and evolving area ensures the program remains at the forefront of legal knowledge in this field.
Objectives:	The graduate programs in labour relations law focus on: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># The identification, use and application of legal principles of Australian labour relations law</li> <li># Emerging and contemporary issues in Australian labour relations law</li> <li># Technical aspects of Australian labour relations law using historical, theoretical and practical perspectives</li> <li># Evaluating and synthesising Australian labour relations law scholarship</li> <li># The development of Australian labour relations law in an international (and comparative) context.</li> </ul>
