Subject Overview:	This subject will introduce you to the ways in which the disciplines of philosophy, politics and economics understand and respond to the challenges of organising a democratic society. We will consider issues such as justice, governments and markets in a way that will allow each discipline to present its distinctive approach. In the lectures and tutorials we will discuss topics including: political legitimacy, the nature and morality of the free market, the exercise of power, citizens' rights and happiness and global justice. Each topic will be explored in ways that will allow you to engage in analysis and evaluation of areas of major public debate about how society should be organised.
Objectives:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Have an understanding of how theoretical insights of the three disciplines can be applied to current political problems; # Understand the types of principles that should guide our thinking about social justice; # Understand the links between the disciplines of philosophy, politics and economics; # Evaluate the role of the market in modern society; # Have an understanding of some of the main traditional and contemporary theories that the disciplines of philosophy, politics and economics use to address these big questions.
Assessment:	One essay of 800 words (20%) due early in semester. one essay of 1200 words (30%) due mid semester. and a two-hour examination (50%) in the examination period. Students must attend a minimum of nine tutorials, demonstrate familiarity with online resources, and participate in the Faculty of Arts online learning community in order to qualify to have their written work assessed.
