Subject Overview:	A study of Asian cultural sector today, focussing on visual arts, museums and the performing arts. It is aimed at current and future arts managers, curators and practitioners engaged in working between Australia and Asian countries. The course introduces issues of "difference" in Asia, between the regions of Asia and issues relating to arts institutions in Asia. There is a focus on the different social, political and cultural backgrounds of North Asia, Southeast Asia and South Asia - and how this affects practice in each place and ramifications for engagement with cross-border colleagues - as well as on arts institutional histories and missions, and, further, their legal, financial, and communication realities. The approach to the material is topic based, with general sessions being followed by more specialised sessions focussing on the visual arts and the performing arts.
