Subject Overview:	This subject is designed to enable students, through introspection, discussion, demonstration and performance to develop and articulate a personal view of what it means to be a performing musician in the current age. Research embraces relevant areas of performance psychology, and interrogation and re-visioning of dominant discourses in music and language, combined with increasing self-knowledge. Students are encouraged to be independent thinkers and emancipated art makers with enhanced (and sometimes new) competencies.
Objectives:	On completion of this course students should have : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # acquired a professional level of expertise in their specialist discipline; # developed a comprehensive knowledge of the musical content and style of a wide body of historical and contemporary repertoire; # developed artistic and creative independence; # acquired appropriate skills in research, writing and criticism; # cultivated a comprehensive knowledge and appreciation of the connections between music, contemporary society and culture including Australia's indigenous culture.
Assessment:	Continuous: participation in seminars (10%). Formal: A lecture/demonstration of 45 minutes approximately followed by group discussion (one per semester) (90%).
