Subject Overview:	This subject offers an introduction to three fundamental questions of human society: what does it mean to be human? How do we find 'truth' and, how should society be organized? The subject will examine selected responses to these questions presented in seminal texts of western intellectual tradition and will invite students to critique and formulate their own views. Emphasis will be on how these ideas have shaped the contemporary world as well as academic conventions. The subject will develop students' analytical skills through the examination of challenging questions, while providing a supportive framework for skills development.
Objectives:	Students who complete this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># be aware of a diversity of views on the nature of humanity, the nature of 'truth' and knowledge, and the organisation of society;</li> <li># have an awareness of some key thinkers and movements of the western intellectual tradition;</li> <li># understand how such views underlie and have shaped the contemporary political, socio-economic and intellectual world;</li> <li># have developed some of their own viewpoints on complex issues of human knowledge and society.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	A tutorial presentation and 800 word essay due the week after presentation (20%), an essay of 800 words due mid-semester (30%) and a research essay of 1500 words due in the examination period (40%), class participation and attendance (10%). Attendance of 75% is a hurdle requirement in order to pass this subject.
