Subject Overview:	This subject investigates three core concepts in contemporary political philosophy: justice, equality, and human rights. What is a just society like? Does it require people to be equal? In what respects? How is the value of equality to be balanced against other values? Can human rights be given an adequate philosophical foundation? If they can, what does respect for human right require of governments and citizens?
Objectives:	Students who successfully complete this subject will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # understand competing contemporary theories of the nature of justice, equality and human rights. # be able to explain these theories clearly. # be able to present informed and fair-minded philosophical evaluations of them.
Assessment:	A written assignment of 2000 words 50% (due mid-semester), a 2-hour closed-book written examination 50% (held at the end of semester).
