Subject Overview:	This subject explores the nature of value - including moral and ethical value, and aesthetic, religious and political value - in human life. Are such values capable of being objectively true or real, or are they essentially 'subjective', having no ground or warrant outside the individual, or perhaps the cultural choosing of them? Or is this whole picture of the alternative ways of thinking about value a mistaken picture? If so, where does the truth about value lie?
Objectives:	Students who successfully complete this subject will <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # be able to apply a range of basic philosophical concepts that have been used to explain the value-orientation of human life and activity # have developed a deeper appreciation of what it means to be a human being living a distinctively human life # be able to bring this appreciation to bear on their other academic studies, and also on the living of their own lives
Assessment:	A written assignment of 2000 words 50% (due mid-semester) and a 2-hour closed-book written examination 50% (held at the end of semester). This subject has a minimum hurdle requirement of 75% tutorial attendance. Regular participation in tutorials is required. Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 10% per day. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject
