Subject Overview:	The subject engages with contemporary theories of social inclusion and capital with an emphasis on networks and their role in community strengthening, community building and regional economic development. The subject also engages in the role these strategies have in larger projects of social policy reform such as the Third Way, the Partnership movement and "joined-up" government. The subject will engage in specific social policy issues (health, housing, welfare, employment etc) as a means to investigate the use of social capital and network analysis techniques.
Objectives:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># understand the theories of social inclusion and social capital formation as they apply to social policy issues in income support, employment, health, education, culture, housing and community care.</li> <li># understand social and economic development as an integrated process from the perspective of both the social policy literature and the development literature.</li> <li># understand the analytical implications of different social policy frameworks such as social inclusion and social capital.</li> <li># understand the theories and strategies of 'joined up' government and the role of networks in social governance.</li> <li># have a sound understanding of the use of comparative perspectives.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	An essay of 2000 words (20%) due early in semester, take home paper of 3000 words based on weekly seminar material (30%) due at end of semester, and a 5000 word project (50%) due in examination period. Hurdle Requirement: Students are required to attend a minimum of 75% of classes in order to qualify to have their written work assessed. Students who fail to meet this hurdle requirement will be deemed ineligible to submit the final piece of assessment for this subject. Regular participation in class is required. Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 2% per working day. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject.
