Subject Overview:	This subject develops teacher candidates' understanding of the place of this learning area in contemporary goals of school in Australia and in the Victorian curriculum in particular. By considering the principles of learning and teaching that underpin effective classrooms and the research that supports these principles, this subject will widen teacher candidates' appreciation of exemplary teaching in this area. The subject explores the characteristics of developmentally appropriate and socially just curriculum in humanities education by examining the theoretical frameworks of the humanities, and linking theory to practice. Through research and reflection teacher candidates will have opportunities to develop a personal philosophy, and understanding of what is best practice in teaching and learning of humanities. The course considers principles of citizenship, democratic process, social justice and ecologically sustainable development and includes an emphasis on providing and planning for, student – centred learning using inquiry-based teaching and learning approaches and current methods of assessment and evaluation. The inquiry based learning approach will assist the development of professional understanding of the significance of classroom interactions as learning opportunities. The course prepares teacher candidates to teach in the broad area of social education, including history, geography and citizenship in the compulsory years of secondary schooling.
