Subject Overview:

Administrative law regulates the relationship between the state and its people, in other words, the relationship between the government and the governed. In particular, it regulates the powers and procedures of the executive branch of government and establishes the mechanisms for ensuring legality, transparency and accountability in executive decision-making. This subject completes the core curriculum's examination of the legal framework of government in Australia. In doing so, it builds on and assumes the knowledge gained in all earlier compulsory subjects including Principles of Public Law and Constitutional Law. In addition to examining the key elements of Australian administrative law, this subject will analyse its application in selected areas of legislative regulation or policy implementation to assess how administrative law is meeting the challenges of privatisation, security pressures, and the adoption of human rights protection. It will also pay particular attention to the advanced development of student skills in statutory interpretation, in the particularly challenging context of administrative law.

Matters covered include:

Introduction

- # Development of executive government and administrative law
- # Types of executive power, including the concept of discretion
- # The functions of administrative law in regulating executive power

Accountability for the exercise of executive power

- # Making and scrutiny of delegated legislation;
- # Access to information;
- # Reasons for administrative decisions;
- # Non-adjudicative review: Parliament, the Ombudsman and others;
- # Tribunals and merits review.

Judicial review of administrative decisions

- # Avenues of judicial review:
 - Commonwealth decisions: the ADJR Act; the Constitution; and the Judiciary Act;
 - State decisions: O56, statutory 'appeal' provisions and the Administrative Law Act.
- # Judicial review procedure;
- # Standing and accessibility;
- # Jurisdictional error;
- # Judicial review grounds;
- # Remedies and the effect of flawed decisions;
- # Excluding / limiting judicial review.

Administrative law in a changing policy context:

- # Adjusting to privatisation and outsourcing;
- # Approaches to regulation, control and accountability;
- # Security concerns and the rule of law;
- # The impact of human rights protection on government powers and administrative law.

Objectives:

On completion of this subject, students should:

- Have developed an understanding of:

- # The structure and operation of executive government in Australia;
- # The fundamental principles of effective governance and accountability for the exercise of government power;
- # Some theoretical perspectives on administrative law, including the relationship between administrative law and governance and the foundations of judicial review;
- # The structure and operation of the Australian administrative law systems, including their constitutional, statutory and common law bases; their institutions; their principles and their remedies;
- # The difference between judicial review and merits review and the kinds of arguments that may be made in each context;

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The importance of statutory construction and interpretation in the exercise and supervision of government powers, and the major techniques and aids used; # The way in which government policies are given effect through legislation and how the legislative and administrative law framework affects their implementation; # The main aspects of practice and procedure in administrative law; # The major challenges to the development of administrative law and accountability in Australia today. - Be able to draw on this understanding to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # To find, state and apply the rules and principles of administrative law; # Describe and critically analyse the fundamental principles of administrative law; # Identify relevant administrative law cases and statutes, and state and critically analyse the legal principles that emerge from them; # Apply the techniques of statutory construction and interpretation to mount and evaluate arguments about the interpretation of statutes conferring powers and authorising government actions; # Critically analyse the relationship between these legal principles and the fundamental principles of administrative law; # Apply these legal principles to new fact situations to construct arguments about: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - The merits of government decisions that may be put in the context of merits review of those decisions; - The legality of government decisions that may be put in the context of judicial review of those decisions # Develop arguments about which legal principles should be applied when the relevant provisions or decisions are unclear or in conflict; # Present these descriptions, analyses and applications of principles in the form of written arguments that are appropriately structured, developed, supported and referenced.
Assessment:	1,000-word Practical Exercise, due in accordance with a common JD assessment schedule designed to ensure regular and reasonable spacing of assessment tasks (20%); 3-hour supervised examination, during the University examination period (80%).
