Subject Overview:	This subject considers the legal issues and transactions relating to the exploration, production and marketing of petroleum, which, owing to its economic and strategic importance, is the most important commodity traded worldwide. The subject will give students a basic understanding of how crude oil and gas are exploited and marketed worldwide. It will cover how countries establish sovereignty over petroleum resources and how host governments or their national (state-owned) oil companies contract with private companies to explore and develop oil and gas resources. The subject also describes and analyses key contracts among petroleum companies, as well as contracts between petroleum companies and petroleum-services contractors that facilitate exploration, development and marketing of petroleum. As petroleum is one of the most politically charged commodities, this subject will also consider extra-territorial anti-corruption law. In a broader sense, this subject will help students develop better analytical skills – especially the ability to critically evaluate contracts. Principal topics will include: # Host government contracts

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Joint bidding, confidentiality, exploration and farmout agreements # Joint operating and unitisation agreements # Managing and contracting to avoid corruption problems # Managing and allocating risk in service contracts.
Objectives:	A student who has successfully completed this subject should understand: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The essential requirements for state sovereignty over natural resources # The essential provisions of host government petroleum investment instruments and risk-service contracts # The essential provisions of joint bidding and confidentiality agreements # The essential provisions of exploration and farmout agreements # The essential provisions of joint operating agreements # The essential provisions of unitisation agreements # The essentials of risk management and allocation of risk in service and drilling contracts # The importance of drafting and administering contracts to avoid corruption problems, especially when contracting with a local consultant.
