Subject Overview:	Proof in litigation is primarily designed as a subject for lawyers looking to improve their skills in analysing evidence as part of the process of preparing for adversarial litigation. The subject is taught in a hands-on workshop format and the final day is spent in the Moot Court, putting the preparation into practice. This subject presents a systematic method for analysing and organising the factual information in a brief or file as part of a lawyer's preparation for trial. The method will be taught through its application to a hypothetical case file. While the focus is on trial preparation, application of the method to a matter is beneficial, whether or not the matter ultimately proceeds to trial. Principal topics will include: # Introduction # Preliminaries # Chronologies

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Investigation # Developing a case theory # Proving the theory # Arguing from and about evidence, including: Witnesses and other sources of evidence, relevance and the drawing of inferences, negative and missing evidence, probative value and the standard of proof # Analysing for admissibility # Pulling it all together for trial.
Objectives:	A student who has successfully completed this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Have developed advanced skills in the analysis of evidence # Have developed an enhanced ability to manage the evidential aspects of litigation # Have developed an enhanced ability to conduct effective case preparation # Be able to apply a systematic method for analysing and organising evidence as part of the process of preparing a matter for trial # Be able to identify the arguments to be used in a closing address and the evidence that will need to be adduced in order for those arguments to be made # Be able to draft an Advice on Evidence # Be able to compile a Trial Book # Be able to demonstrate the achievement of these objectives in relation to a specific case.
