Subject Overview:	Employment contracts have been a major source of litigation in recent years, with some cases leading to payouts amounting to millions of dollars. This subject examines the evolving law of employment contracts, and other related kinds of personal work contracts. Drawing on recent cases as well as leading articles by Australian and international scholars, the lecturers consider several key questions. These include determining and varying contract terms, employer and employee duties, non-compete clauses, termination and damages. The subject also looks at the interaction between employment contracts and major statutes, such as the Australian Consumer Law and the Fair Work Act 2009 (Cth). The subject seeks to combine discussions of the practical realities of contracting with a broader analysis of the underlying assumptions in current law. Principal topics will include: # The scope of employment regulation: Which work relationships are covered? # The regulation of independent contracting, such as agency relationships

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The content of the employment contract: Express terms # The content of the employment contract: Implied terms and incorporation of employer policy manuals # Employment, the Competition and Consumer Act 2010 (Cth) and estoppel # Variation and flexibility in the employment contract # Termination at common law # The relationship between contracts, awards and agreements # Statutory remedies for termination of employment.
Objectives:	A student who has successfully completed this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Be able to apply, at an advanced level, relevant legal principles to the individual employment relationship in problem-solving exercises # Be able to analyse emerging and contemporary issues in employment contract law and scholarship, including issues such as recruitment; non-compete obligations; the interaction between express and implied contractual terms; the relationship between policies and employment contracts and the relationship between federal legislation (the Fair Work Act and the Competition and Consumer Act 2010 (Cth)) and employment contracts # Be able to evaluate aspects of Australian employment law drawing on scholarly and policy-oriented writing from Australia and overseas # Demonstrate an understanding of the development of Australian employment contract law in an international context.
