Subject Overview:	Gambling is one of the most heavily regulated industry sectors in Australian society, yet is a leisure activity enjoyed by many Australians. This subject will provide background to the manner in which it is regulated in Australia, and internationally, and provide guidance on the challenges facing the sector and how it may be regulated in the future. The subject will also address emerging issues affecting the gambling sector, including the impact of new technologies and the globalisation of the industry. The two lecturers are leaders in the field. Mr Jamie Nettleton is recognised internationally as a leading expert in legal issues relating to the gambling industry and advises all categories of operators within the gaming industry. Professor Rose is an internationally recognised scholar in the area with more than 1,500 published works and as a public speaker, often the keynote speaker on gambling issues. Principal topics will include: # What is gambling?

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The regulation of the Australian gambling sector # The policy, business and legal challenges posed to the success of the Australian gambling sector, both within Australia and from international sources # The best compliance model for the regulation of the sector.
