Subject Overview:	This subject is designed to develop research skills for students planning and writing research theses in the School of Social and Political Sciences. The subject explores contemporary research strategies, differing methodological approaches to social research, the relationship of theory and research, and practical issues concerned with designing thesis topics and their realization through the research process, including the management of ethics principles and procedures. The subject gives special attention to the design of problem-driven research. It will assist students to develop skills in thesis preparation and development as well as in the framing of research projects, more generally. The subject is taught through a combination of lectures, workshops and seminars.
Objectives:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># Have an understanding of the theoretical, methodological, resource and ethical considerations of relevance in designing a social science research project.</li> <li># Have an appreciation of the role of theory in the framing of social research.</li> <li># Have a sense of the need to identify appropriate research strategies when undertaking research.</li> <li># Have an awareness of the analytical and organizational skills required in social science research.</li> <li># Have completed a fully developed research proposal for their thesis.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	A research proposal study of 5000 words, worth 100% (due mid-Semester 1). Hurdle Requirement: As this is an Intensively-taught subject, Lecture/Seminar attendance is compulsory on all 4 days. Students who fail to meet this hurdle requirement will be deemed ineligible to submit the final piece of assessment for this subject. Regular participation in class is required. Assessment that is submitted after the due date and up to 10 working days late without an approved extension will be marked on a pass/fail basis only. Assessment that is submitted later than 10 working days will not be accepted or marked. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject.
