Subject Overview:	This subject provides an advanced introduction to the major theories of International Relations and their influence on international affairs. Students will be introduced to mainstream approaches like realism / neo-realism, liberal internationalism / neoliberal institutionalism, as well as 'critical' approaches such as marxism constructivism, feminism and post-colonialism. Students will explore the more radical methodological debates between Rationalism and interpretivism, as well as the broad tensions between universalism and particularism and the cultural and religious contexts in which these debates arise. The subject will also explore how different theories of International Relations have shaped contemporary debates and practices in international affairs, including the role of power and morality, the role of international institutions, and practices of inclusion and exclusion.
Objectives:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># demonstrate a familiarity with the major theoretical perspectives in world politics.</li> <li># understand the major points of disagreement between these perspectives.</li> <li># be able to relate the theoretical debates about world politics to practical problems and issues.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	1. Two x 1000 word briefing papers, written on seminar topics of your choosing, each worth 20% due during the semester; 2. A 3000 word essay worth 60% due during the examination period. Hurdle Requirement: Students are required to attend a minimum of 75% of classes in order to qualify to have their written work assessed. Students who fail to meet this hurdle requirement will be deemed ineligible to submit the final piece of assessment for this subject. Regular participation in class is required. Assessment that is submitted after the due date and up to 10 working days late without an approved extension will be marked on a pass/fail basis only. Assessment that is submitted later than 10 working days will not be accepted or marked. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked.
