Subject Overview:	This subject examines the educational relevance of sport and outdoor education. Through both practical experience and theoretical framing, the educational relevance of sport and outdoor recreation is investigated and analysed. This investigation and analysis will draw comparisons and contrasts between sport and outdoor education, as well as considering broader notions of curriculum as exemplified in the Victorian Essential Learnings Standards. A philosophical perspective will be taken in regards to comprehending this investigation and analysis, informed primarily by the theories of John Dewey. Participating students will be required to fund a portion of the cost of travel and accommodation necessary to complete the requirements of the subject. Further information is available from the subject coordinator.
Objectives:	On completion of the course it is expected that students should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Describe the aims and function of the Victorian Essential Learning Standards. • Explain a theory of education as informed by the philosophy of John Dewey. • Evaluate the educational relevance of sport and outdoor education. • Apply a theory of education in the analysis of the educational relevance of particular educational areas.
Assessment:	2 x 1000-word phenomenologically orientated reports which detail field trip experience (25% each, 50% in total) spread through the semester; 1 x 2000 word analysis of the similarities and differences between the two prior reports informed by the philosophical framework covered in classes (50%), due at the end of semester.
