Course Overview:	2010 was the final intake into this program. It is not be possible to transfer into this degree, students wishing to study a Media and Communications major can do so in the Melbourne Model Bachelor of Arts (http://ba.unimelb.edu.au/) _ () The Media and Communications program is a Bachelor of Arts stream designed to provide students with optimal access to the globally expanding world of media and new communication technologies and to future post graduate study and research. The program is deliberately interdisciplinary in nature and offers a distinctive blend of academic study and media-related practice delivered by internationally recognized scholars and experienced industry professionals. By this means students can determine pathways to a wide range of media-related careers and opportunities and/or prepare a foundation for later postgraduate study and advanced research. These subjects represent the latest thinking and research in the international field of scholarship and students select core and optional subjects from a wide range of related areas according to their own interests and career trajectories. Subjects offered include, amongst many others, Net Communications; Media Futures and New Technologies; Politics; Communication; Marketing and Communications; Advanced Writing; Writing Journalism; Asian Public Relations; Perspectives in Global Media Cultures; Understanding Australian Media and Media Law. Hands-on media industry experience and project based research is also available through our popular internships and the final research project. Media and Communications is studied as interrelated global-local processes comprising media institutions and communication technologies, media representations and texts, and the media audiences and processes of reception all situated in relation to social political and cultural contexts, and the historical dynamics of change. Students are encouraged to develop their critical understanding of the changing nature and role(s) of Media and Communications in today's 'mediatised' societies as well as develop practical skills and research aptitudes of use to them in their future careers within today's rapidly changing global media environment.
Objectives:	The Bachelor of Arts (Media and Communications) has as its objectives that graduates: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # are enabled to develop a comprehensive overview of the media's place in today's society, economy and culture, with an emphasis on the Asia-Pacific region; # are provided with the fundamental written communication skills required by successful journalists and other media professionals; # are helped to achieve an understanding of new communication technologies and their impact on the fast changing global media environment; # are trained to think across media- a skill of increasing importance for the next generation of media professionals and media researchers; # are helped to appreciate the value of an international and interdisciplinary approach to the study of Media and Communications; # are offered the opportunity to gain industry experience in the form of internships; # are offered opportunities to develop research skills and engage in applied analysis of media within different subjects and through the presentation of a final research project.
