Subject Overview:	This subject traces the origin and development of the concept of the image of Western medieval thought. It examines the roles images played in medieval society through a survey of the various religious, philosophical, cultural and political frameworks in which conflicting attitudes toward image-making were developed. Lectures will introduce the differing ways in which philosophical and biblical traditions regarding figurative art and its value for religion shaped contrasting attitudes and led to aniconism and iconoclasm. The complex relationship Christians, Jews and Muslims shared with the visual arts will be addressed, and the legacy of disputes. Using specific case studies, tutorials will focus on how these attitudes were manifest in particular art works or monuments, with site visits to Univeristy of Melbourne collections and to the National Gallery of Victoria.
Objectives:	On completion of the subject students should have: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># acquired a good knowledge of the intellectual history of the visual image;</li> <li># become aware of the social, cultural, or historical forces that shaped/affected certain intellectual movements and thus influenced attitudes toward image-making in the medieval period;</li> <li># developed an understanding of the different visual strategies employed by artists in the medieval period for representing the divine;</li> <li># developed an ability to analyse a work of art during the period in relation to the social, political or religious context in which it was created;</li> <li># developed an understanding of the conditions of the reception of medieval images, alongside issues relating to their production.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	An essay of 2000 words 50% (due during semester) and a take home exam of 2000 words 50% (due in the examination period). This subject has a minimum hurdle requirement of 75% attendance and regular participation in tutorials. Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 10% per day. All pieces of written work must be submitted in order to pass this subject.
Prescribed Texts:	A subject reader will be available, or readings will be provided online.
