Subject Overview:	While ethnography as method is the most distinguishing feature of anthropology, ethnographic practice has always taken place in continual conversation with theory. Just as theoretical and philosophical considerations sometimes guide and generate particular ethnographic orientations and issues, sometimes ethnographic practices generate theoretical developments that have had repercussions well beyond anthropology. This subject explores various important moments in the ethnographic generation of theory that has occurred throughout the history of anthropology. It examines in some details the ethnographic texts where the theories were first developed.
Objectives:	Students who successfully complete this subject will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># Develop an appreciation of the way key theories have been generated through ethnographic practice;</li> <li># Gain an understanding of the way theory is woven into ethnographic texts;</li> <li># Achieve a solid understanding of the way certain ethnographically generated theories become pertinent across the humanities and the social sciences;</li> <li># Acquire the capacity to understand the way the researching of particular empirical material can generate universal knowledge that transcends the particularity of the research situation.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	A summary of 1000 words (25%) due in the 2nd week of the intensive teaching period, and an essay of 3000 words (75%) due 3 weeks after the conclusion of the intensive teaching period. Hurdle Requirement: This subject has a minimum hurdle requirement of 75% tutorial attendance. Regular participation in tutorials is required. Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 10% per day. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject.
Prescribed Texts:	A reading pack will be made available to students
