Subject Overview:	Migration is no doubt one of the most significant drivers of social change in the developing world. The objective of this subject is to examine key issues and debates around the migration - development nexus. Two main goals will be pursued in seminars. First, students will be provided with a sound understanding of the conceptual models and theoretical frameworks that have been used to analyse migration and development. Second, we will discuss empirical studies on economic, social and cultural implications of migration for development processes at both micro and macro levels. Most importantly, we will critically assess the links between migration and key debates in development such as globalisation, poverty, gender and social change.
Objectives:	Students who successfully complete this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># understand the range of circumstances which might produce human mobility in the modern world;</li> <li># comprehend the implications of migration for development processes;</li> <li># understand the different scales (global, national and local) which are relevant to thinking about mobility;</li> <li># have a strong grasp of theoretical and methodological knowledge pertaining to human mobility and development;</li> <li># be able to integrate existing theoretical and empirical materials within oral presentations;</li> <li># be able to think and argue critically about issues relating to migration and development.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	A 2,000 word essay (40%) due during the semester, and a 3000 word essay (60%) due during the examination period. Hurdle Requirement: Students are required to attend a minimum of 75% of classes in order to qualify to have their written work assessed. Regular participation in class is required. Assessment that is submitted after the due date and up to 10 working days late without an approved extension will be marked on a pass/fail basis only. Assessment that is submitted later than 10 working days will not be accepted or marked. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject.
