Subject Overview:	Students will be fine-tuning what they have learnt so far of Arabic structures, will be adding to their already substantial knowledge of Arabic syntax, and will be sharpening their analytical skills. In the process, they will be reading Arabic poetry, mediaeval tales, literary prose, informative writing, studies, evaluative, persuasive and argumentative articles, and producing their own pieces of informative, evaluative, argumentative, persuasive and imaginative writing. They will also gain insight into the ongoing debate on classical Arabic, Modern Standard Arabic and colloquial Arabic, and the future of the Arabic language. Students will be watching/listening to TV programs on current affairs and on topics of personal and/or professional interest, interviews and short lectures which will also help to further develop their listening comprehension skills. They will take part in discussions and debates expressing opinions and conveying emotions on a range of more complex cultural, social and political topics. While developing students' proficiency in the language, the various activities will also help them gain a deeper understanding about the history and culture of the Middle East and the Arab World and of Islam and modern politics.
Objectives:	On completion of this subject, students will: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # have deepened their understanding of important grammatical structures of the Arabic language along with an understanding of their functions, and the ability to use these to engage in sophisticated written and oral communication; # have developed a clear spoken facility in Modern Standard Arabic enabling them to narrate, elaborate and describe, to take part in discussions and debates and to prepare presentations on a variety of topics; # have developed the ability to read and interact with a variety of Arabic text types such as poetry, literary prose, informative writing, studies, persuasive and argumentative articles, handling unvocalised texts without much difficulty;

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # have developed the ability to produce complex narratives, informative, argumentative, persuasive and imaginative writing; # have gained more insight into the political and cultural history and movements of the Arabs and the Middle East, and into traditional and modern intellectual movements; # have been exposed to information about Islam and politics today.
Assessment:	Continuous homework assessment (8 pieces of written assignments, throughout the semester) 15%, one piece of argumentative or persuasive writing of 500 words (during the middle of semester) 10%, continuous oral assessment (throughout the semester) 15%, a 1-hour mid-semester written test (during the middle of semester) 15%, a 15-minute oral examination (during the examination period) 15%, and a 2-hour written examination (during the examination period) 30%.
