Course Overview:	Energy and resources are dominant in the Australian economy, and have long been so. The management of these resources presents formidable legal challenges for governments and private enterprise, at global, national and local levels. Australia's record in meeting these challenges is internationally recognised, and Australian energy and resources companies operate successfully in many parts of the world. Melbourne Law School's graduate program in energy and resources law allows lawyers and other professionals to gain expertise and skills in statutory and contractual regimes governing exploration and production, sophisticated commercial transactions relating to those activities, project finance, regulatory controls and resolution of resources conflicts, drawing upon Australian experience and applying it globally.
Objectives:	Graduates will have: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # An in-depth knowledge of the specialist area of Energy and Resources Law within the ambit of the four subjects chosen # Detailed knowledge of the complex law and regulation in the field covered by those subjects # The capacity to critically evaluate and apply the substantive knowledge gained # Advanced skills in writing, research, problem-solving and communication in all aspects of the course # The capacity to identify new laws and/or apply existing law in the rapidly evolving legal context for energy and resources # A developed capacity to synthesise information across disciplines, while applying an in-depth legal knowledge # A sound understanding of developments in international Energy and Resources law.
Course Structure & Available Subjects:	Students must complete four subjects from the prescribed list. In addition, students who do not have a law degree from a common law jurisdiction or any prior legal studies or experience are also expected to complete the two-day preliminary subject Australian Legal Process and Legal Institutions.

Capacity to manage competing demands on timeThe demanding nature of graduate study requires effective time-management skills from all students. The rigour of our programs, whether undertaken part-time or full-time,

	ensures that all successful graduates have enhanced time-management skills. Profound respect for truth and intellectual integrity, including the ethics of scholarshipSome subjects have a substantive ethical component. All instructors have a respect for intellectual integrity and are skilled scholars or practitioners in their own right. Appreciation of the way in which knowledge provides a foundation for leadershipInstructors in the Melbourne Law Masters are leaders in their fields, and many subjects involve visiting academics, exposing students to a wider array of leaders in a range of legal fields. The Law School is committed to the significance of knowledge, which informs all regular programs and a wide range of additional activities. Capacity to value and participate in teamworkSmall class sizes and an intensive teaching format are valuable in encouraging group dynamics and teamwork. Understanding of the significance and value of knowledge to the wider communityLaw and legal knowledge are a community resource. In some subjects, this perspective is covered explicitly by the syllabus and the manner in which issues are treated in class. In addition, our diverse student body ensures that a range of perspectives on the way law impacts on the community are identified and analysed. Capacity to engage with issues in contemporary societyOur programs focus on the most up-to-date legal knowledge, analysing current issues and problems through the curriculum design, classroom discussion and assessment tasks. International students are also invited to participate in extracurricular activities to aid understanding of Australian law and legal institutions.
