Subject Overview:	Proprietary legal rights attach to intangible subject matter such as creative works and industrial advances. Reflecting the increased commercial significance of such subject matter this is a fertile growth area in private law. It is also an area of increasing controversy in which the balance between the need to provide incentive and protection for private endeavour must be weighted against societal interests once acts of creation of invention have yielded valuable information goods. Topics to be covered in the subject include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The equitable action of breach of confidence, including its relationship with the common law restraint of trade doctrine; # The protection of invention and innovation under the Patents Act 1990 (Cth); # The protection of authorship, productions and performers under the Copyright Act 1968 (Cth), including particular issues surrounding digitised networks; # The protection for designers of distinctive mass produced items under the Designs Act 2003 (Cth), including its relationship with copyright protection.
Objectives:	A student who successfully completes Property in Invention and Creation will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Appreciate the nature and policy roles of confidential information, patent, copyright and design law as legal regimes within private law; # Recognise the correct categorisation of subject matter within those legal regimes; # Determine the nature of exclusion associated with ownership or control of subject matter within those legal regimes; # Apply legal regimes in particular scenarios to resolve ambiguity and arrive at reasoned conclusions as to what outcomes may pertain in a court; and # Critically analyse and evaluate those outcomes against the public policy roles of the legal regimes.
Assessment:	A 6,000-word take-home exam during scheduled exam period (100%)
Prescribed Texts:	Specialist printed materials made available from the Melbourne Law School
Breadth Options:	This subject is not available as a breadth subject.
