Subject Overview:	The proliferation of international criminal courts and tribunals over the previous two decades represents a significant new phase in the development of a global justice system and has resulted in an expanding body of jurisprudence involving the interpretation and application of international criminal law. This subject will focus on the contemporary environment, with a particular emphasis on the International Criminal Court as the world's first permanent international criminal tribunal. Students will explore the historical background to this new phase of institution-building and also discuss the purpose of war crimes trials. The lecturer in the subject is currently advising the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court and will draw extensively on this practical experience to ensure class discussion is grounded in contemporary case law. Principal topics will include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # The nature of law, war and crime and the purpose of war crimes trials # Concept of individual criminal responsibility for violations of international law, including the doctrine of command responsibility # Elaboration of basic crimes # Universal jurisdiction

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> # International criminal courts # International vs national jurisdictions and the concept of universal jurisdiction # Different models of international criminal courts and tribunals # The International Criminal Court.
