Course Overview:	The Melbourne JD is a fully graduate law degree. Applicants must have either an undergraduate degree in a discipline other than law or a degree in law from a different legal system. The JD leads to admission to the legal profession in all Australian jurisdictions and can be used as a basis for seeking admission in many overseas jurisdictions as well. Melbourne Law School aims to produce intellectually engaged graduates who are well equipped to use their legal training in a variety of professional settings, including legal practice, and to make a contribution to the community. Melbourne Law School will select students from a broad range of backgrounds who have a record of academic excellence, and are intellectually rigorous, motivated and engaged with the study of law. Melbourne Law School believes that a diverse student body enriches both the learning and practice of law, and for this reason we encourage applications from graduates with a range of cultural and socio-economic backgrounds, as well as from a variety of academic disciplines, geographical locations, careers and life experiences. Selection into the JD is based on academic results in all tertiary study undertaken; the score received in a legal aptitude test (LSAT); and a short personal statement. In addition, Melbourne has a Graduate Access program for students who have been disadvantaged, and guaranteed pathways to the degree for some high achieving school leavers. As a result of these selection criteria, the Melbourne JD student body will be diverse, motivated and highly talented. JD students will bring to the study of law a wide range of knowledge and experience gained from their undergraduate degrees, and the Melbourne JD is designed to respond to the exciting challenge of teaching law to such a group. The curriculum has been developed specifically for graduates and the course is structured and taught in a way that is suitable for graduates. Usually the maximum class size is 60 and in many subjects it is smaller, to enhance the opportunities for interaction between students and teachers and amongst students themselves. The law degree is taught over six semesters under the standard three year course structure, with options for flexible study subject to Law School approval. The teaching year begins in February. Applications for admission are assessed in the latter part of the preceding year. The Melbourne JD comprises 24 subjects. Seventeen are compulsory, enabling the School to provide its students with cumulative learning, by integrating both subject matter and skills across and between semesters. Students are grouped into cohorts for most compulsory subjects. This enhances the collegial experience of, and learning communities forged between, students during their time in the School and establishes bonds that will continue long after graduation. The remaining subjects are chosen by students from a wide range of optional subjects offered

	by the School. These vary from year to year, enabling the School to respond to changes in the law and legal thinking and giving students access to the latest developments in research by some of the leading scholars in the School. The School has offered the Melbourne JD since 2000. It has been an outstanding success. It set a benchmark for legal education in Australia and was welcomed by students, teachers and employers alike. The degree that has been offered from 2008 builds on that experience, adapting it to the needs of a larger and more diverse student body.
Objectives:	The objectives of the degree are to ensure, as far as possible, that every graduate with a Melbourne JD has the following attributes and skills: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Profound respect for truth and intellectual integrity, and for the ethics of scholarship and legal practice; # Highly developed cognitive, analytic and problem-solving skills; # Capacity for independent critical thought, rational inquiry and self-directed learning; # Intellectual curiosity and creativity including understanding of the philosophical and methodological bases of research activity; # Extensive knowledge of the discipline of law, including legal knowledge and skills, and informed respect for the principles, disciplines, values and ethics of the legal profession; # Ability and self-confidence to comprehend complex concepts, to express them lucidly, whether orally or in writing, and to confront unfamiliar problems; # Awareness of advanced communications technologies and modalities, sound working skills in the application of computer systems and software, and receptiveness to the expanding opportunities of the 'information revolution'; # International awareness and openness to the world, based on understanding and appreciation of social and cultural diversity and respect for human rights and dignity; # Leadership capacity, including a willingness to engage in constructive public discourse, to accept social and civic responsibilities and to speak out against prejudice, injustice and the abuse of power; # Ability and confidence to participate effectively in collaborative learning as a team-member, while respecting individual differences; and # Ability to plan work and to use time effectively.
Course Structure & Available Subjects:	The Melbourne JD comprises 24 subjects. The law degree is taught over six semesters under the standard three year full time course structure, with options for flexible study subject to Law School approval. A combined course, with the Melbourne Business School's MBA program, is also available. Compulsory subjects The compulsory subjects, in the order in which they are usually taken, are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # Legal Method and Reasoning # Principles of Public Law # Obligations # Dispute Resolution # Constitutional Law # Contracts # Torts # Legal Theory # Administrative Law # Trusts # Property # Criminal Law and Procedure # Corporations Law # Remedies # Evidence and Proof # Legal Ethics # Legal Research

The subjects are organised so as to ensure a balanced range in each semester, between which linkages can be made. In addition, subjects in both private and public law build progressively over the semesters, contributing to the effectiveness of the learning experience.

Elective subjects

A vibrant and exciting optional program will be offered by the School each year. Many of the actual subjects will vary from year to year, in response to demand and emerging trends.

To view current electives (<http://www.law.unimelb.edu.au/jd/course-and-subjects/subject-pages>) listings please visit the Melbourne JD website.

Standard course structure - three years

In its standard form, the degree is taken over three years. This format enables students to take advantage of other educational, professional and social opportunities during the summer and winter breaks, including seasonal clerkships, international exchanges, internships, mooting and Law Review editorial work.

Flexible course structures

The Melbourne JD can also be accelerated by students with outstanding results with approval from the Law School, by utilizing the summer and winter break periods to complete additional JD subjects. The Melbourne JD can also be extended up to four years, subject to Law School approval. This flexibility enables students to take advantage of other educational, professional and social opportunities during the summer and winter breaks, including seasonal clerkships, international exchanges, internships, mooting and Law Review editorial work. These opportunities are necessarily more limited for accelerating students.

Entry Requirements:

In selecting applicants for admission to the JD, the School seeks to determine whether applicants are suited to the graduate study of law and whether they are likely to succeed.

The Law School will select students from a broad range of backgrounds who have a record of academic excellence, and are intellectually rigorous, motivated and likely to be engaged with the study of law. The Law School believes that a diverse student body enriches both the learning and practice of law, and for this reason we encourage applications from graduates with a range of cultural and socio-economic backgrounds, as well as from a range of academic disciplines, geographical locations, careers and life experiences.

Applicants must have either an undergraduate degree in a discipline other than law or a degree in law from a different legal system.

The three criteria for general entry selection are:

- # The score in the LSAT test;
- # Academic results achieved in previous tertiary studies;
- # The applicant's personal statement.

No single one of these criteria is determinative. In addition, Melbourne has a Graduate Access program for students who have been disadvantaged, and guaranteed pathways to the degree for some high achieving school leavers.

English requirements for the JD

	Applicants who have not obtained a university degree from an institution in which English is the language of instruction and assessment must have obtained a score of 610 or more in the American TOEFL, including an Essay rating score of 5.0 in the TWE; or a score of 253 in the computer-based TOEFL; or an overall band score of 7.0 or more in the IELTS, with a minimum band score of 7.0 in the Academic Writing Module. Detailed information about the application and selection process for the Melbourne JD is available on the website at www.law.unimelb.edu.au/jd (http://www.law.unimelb.edu.au/jd)
Core Participation Requirements:	The Melbourne Law School welcomes applications from students with disabilities. It is University and Law School policy to take all reasonable steps to enable the participation of students with disabilities, and reasonable adjustments will be made to enhance a student's participation in the School's programs. The inherent academic requirements for the study in the Melbourne Law School are: The ability to attend classes and actively engage in the analysis of complex materials and debate; The ability to read, analyse and comprehend complex written legal materials and complex interdisciplinary materials; The ability to clearly and independently communicate in writing a knowledge and application of legal principles and interdisciplinary materials and critically evaluate these; The ability to clearly and independently communicate orally a knowledge and application of legal principles and interdisciplinary materials and critically evaluate these; The ability to work independently and as a part of a group; The ability to present orally and in writing legal analysis to a professional standard. Students must possess behavioural and social attributes that enable them to participate in a complex learning environment. Students are required to take responsibility for their own participation and learning. They also contribute to the learning of other students in collaborative learning environments, demonstrating interpersonal skills and an understanding of the needs of other students. Assessment may include the outcomes of tasks completed in collaboration with other students. Students who feel their disability will prevent them from participating in tasks involving these inherent academic requirements are encouraged to contact the Disability Liaison Unit: http://www.services.unimelb.edu.au/disability/.
