Subject Overview:	This subject introduces major sociological approaches to youth. It locates young people's experience in a context of social change with reference to the ways in which school, work, family, gender, class, geographic location and culture shape the meaning of youth in the 21st Century. The subject also examines ways youth is constructed as a social category through policy, discussing contemporary issues such as youth homelessness, citizenship, health, wellbeing and social identities. It focuses on young people's responses to their circumstances exploring ways young people can be understood as social actors. It explores the new ways in which young people approach learning and work and examines their uses of digital communication. On completion of this subject students will have deepened their knowledge of contemporary sociological approaches to youth; have a knowledge of contemporary youth policy, with reference to current Australian debates; and have an ability to critically evaluate areas of contemporary youth policy.
Objectives:	On successful completion of this subject students should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># have a knowledge of contemporary sociological approaches to youth;</li> <li># be able to use sociological frameworks to explore key dimensions of the contemporary youth experience;</li> <li># have a knowledge of contemporary youth policy, with reference to current Australian debates;</li> <li># have an ability to evaluate critically areas of contemporary youth policy.</li> </ul>
