Subject Overview:	Migration is no doubt one of the most significant drivers of social change in the developing world. The objective of this subject is to examine key issues and debates around the migration - development nexus. Two main goals will be pursued in seminars. First, students will be provided with an overview of the conceptual models and theoretical frameworks that have been used to analyse migration and development. Second, we will discuss empirical studies on economic, social and cultural implications of migration for development processes at both micro and macro levels. Most importantly, we will critically assess the links between migration and key debates in development such as globalisation, poverty, gender and social change.
Learning Outcomes:	Students who successfully complete this subject should: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> # understand the range of circumstances which might produce human mobility in the modern world; # comprehend implications of migration for development processes; # understand the different scales (global, national and local) relevant to thinking about mobility; # understand key empirical, theoretical and methodological knowledge pertaining to human mobility and development;
Assessment:	A 2,000 word essay (40%) due during the semester, and a 3000 word essay (60%) due during the examination period. Hurdle Requirement: Students are required to attend a minimum of 75% of classes in order to qualify to have their written work assessed. Regular participation in class is required. Assessment submitted late without an approved extension will be penalised at 10% per working day. In-class tasks missed without approval will not be marked. All pieces of written work must be submitted to pass this subject.
