Subject Overview:	This subject will focus on the significance of cultural and contextual framings of knowledge and learning. Topics will include; a consideration of sociological, historical, political and cultural influences on knowledge; the analysis of knowledge and thinking from multiple cultural perspectives; novice versus expert representations of a topic; internationalisation and globalisation of knowledge. Students will be encouraged to examine the knowledge they are learning from these perspectives, and identify the implications for their understanding of the ideas. Students will engage with a wide range of cultural expressions through visiting several of the cultural collections in the University of Melbourne, including art works, scientific specimens, artifacts and archives.
Learning Outcomes:	The aim of this subject is to lead students to understand <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• how knowledge, understanding and learning are influenced by a range of factors; and</li> <li>• how an awareness of these influences can lead to enhanced understanding and knowledge.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	There are two assessment tasks: A 2,000-word assignment in which students will select objects they are studying and (i) identify the cultural and contextual influences on their interpretation and (ii) alternative interpretations of the knowledge from other influential perspectives, due mid-semester (50 per cent); A 2,000-word assignment in which students will select cultural collections they are studying and identify (i) how multiple perspectives on a topic lead to greater understanding, (ii) how the topic is shaped by particular factors such as the culture and the point in history in which it is constructed; due in the examination period (50 per cent).
Prescribed Texts:	Readings will be provided throughout the semester.
