Subject Overview:	This subject explores how identities and cultures are constructed and contested within the shifting domains of transnationalism constituted by intersections across local, national and global arenas. It examines some of the ways in which the social media and the latest information technologies impact the formation of identities and cultures through the dynamics of globalization. It considers the changing narratives of class, gender, and ethnic relations and their impact on youth identities. It shows how global movements of people (and capital) either voluntary or forced, challenge previously accepted notions of identity and culture, especially traditional belief systems and result in many people seeking certainty in an era that is subject to rapid and relentless change. It considers issues of identity politics, interculturalism and social conflict. These shifts have profound implications for education, requiring an examination of the ways in which the changing meanings of key principles and concepts such as human rights, democracy, nationalism and identity relate to the teaching of citizenship. The subject therefore examines the future of citizenship, with a view to understanding and enhancing the role of global citizenship education.
Learning Outcomes:	The subject seeks to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># assess how recent changes associated with the global mobility of capital, people, ideas and technologies demand new ways of thinking about issues of identity and culture.</li> </ul>

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li># examine shifts relating to cultural globalization, with an emphasis on the ways in which the changing narratives of class, gender, and ethnic relations are reshaping youth identities and cultures</li> <li># consider how these shifts have major implications for education, especially with respect to teaching of social studies and citizenship education and also initiative in internationalization of the curriculum.</li> </ul>
Assessment:	A short essay based on the online learning activities – equivalent of 2000 words (20%) A minor essay 3000 words (topics to be announced) (30%) A major essay 5000 words -(topics to be announced) (50%) - This assignment will build on the first, benefiting from feedback from completion of the first.
