Course Overview:	Global processes have transformed the requirements of work and the labour market, as well as cultural and political landscapes, requiring new ways of approaching education and training. The Specialist Certificate of Global Studies in Education will explore the complex ways in which the world is becoming interconnected and interdependent and the impact of this on education settings, pedagogy, curriculum and assessment. It highlights the imperatives for responding to the changing external environment with regard education policy and governance. Targeted at practicing teaching professionals employed in transnational educational settings, the course covers contemporary issues in globalisation, policy and leadership. It is expected that the course will be of particular interest to international Schools and the teachers they employ, as well as non-government organisations (NGOs) such as AusAid where there is large workforce with responsibility for the delivery of Aid funded educational programs in transnational settings. To attract and enable a transnational cohort that reflects the focus of the program, delivery will be fully on-line. Cohorts will be limited to a maximum number of participants that will complete the program as a cohort and requires the cohort to pursue the same sequence of subjects. New deliveries will be scheduled once a new minimum cohort is achieved. This approach is modelled on a successful international program delivered by the University of Illinois, which was coordinated by Professor Fazal Rizvi, who will be the Course Coordinator for this program. The University of Illinois is the only other global provider of a Global Studies in Education online program. MGSE has specifically listed this course in its most recent Business Plan as a strategic priority in delivering postgraduate qualifications wholly online. The faculty has enlisted MCP to support and operationalize this strategy. MCP currently delivers industry focused online programs with MGSE.
